

Ben Sawyer

Executive Vice President

Applying front line hospital operations experience to tackle pervasive patient throughput challenges

Ben Sawyer has taken a lead role in developing the industry's first Hospital Operating System™ solution.

Ben has over 25 years experience in managing healthcare operations. He was the executive responsible for system-wide performance and process improvement, and served as the quality council chair for St. Mary's Health Care System (a CHE hospital system in Georgia). He also managed multiple operational service lines within two other health systems before coming to StatCom.

Ben's hospital operational and PI/Quality leadership experience gives him a unique and practical approach when addressing the capacity and patient throughput challenges hospitals and health systems face today. He is pleased to now be overseeing a StatCom team of professionals who are passionately committed to enabling hospitals to transform their operations.

Ben was recruited to StatCom after his own pursuit of patient throughput management solutions led him to StatCom as the vendor-of-choice. During his tenure at StatCom he has served in a number of leadership roles including Executive Vice President of Client Services responsible for Implementation, Support, Product Management, and Transformation Engineering, as well as the Executive Vice President responsible for Sales and Marketing.

Ben is experienced in addressing healthcare industry groups and hospital organizations on the operational challenges facing healthcare executives, process improvement methodologies and technologies, and sharing case studies regarding strategic partner engagements for the establishment of hospital operating systems.
