Mary Kay's hospital operational and PI/Quality leadership experience gives her a unique and practical approach when addressing the capacity and patient throughput challenges hospitals and health systems face today. She has worked extensively with physicians and staff in the development and execution of high-impact, innovative strategies in achieving business objectives and opportunities.

She is pleased to be part of a team of professionals who are passionately committed to enabling hospitals to transform their operations. Mary Kay was recruited to StatCom after her pursuit of patient throughput management solutions led her to StatCom as the vendor-of-choice. Her visionary leadership and strategic thinking led to the development of a patient care delivery model that became the operational blueprint for the facility.

“I was recruited to StatCom after my pursuit of patient throughput management solutions led me to it as the vendor-of-choice. The StatCom team is composed of a group of professionals who are passionately committed to enabling hospitals to transform their operations.”

Mary Kay is a graduate of the College of St. Mary and the University of Nebraska where she received an MBA.
